Monthly Commentary

The Alpha Moderate Fund delivered a total return of -1.83% (net of fees) in October 2023, which was below the Morningstar Australian Moderate Target Allocation Index by -0.16% and the Peer Group Median by -0.48%.

October was the second consecutive tough month for all asset classes except Cash, with International and Australian Shares down as reporting season got underway in the USA. For the Fund, the key contributors were Large US Technology Shares (including Microsoft, Amazon, Meta Platforms and Apple) and a selection of Healthcare stocks (led by Novo Nordisk and Eli Lilly). Footwear designer and distributor, Deckers Outdoor, which owns iconic Australian brand UGG boots, was another major winner and was up +18% for the month.

The main detractors were in Australia, with Office Property landlord, Dexus, being the largest detractor. It was down -11% due to higher bond yields, softening asset values and the announced impending departure of CEO Darren Steinberg. Transport and logistics company, Brambles, was another loser and was down -8% for the month. While the Fund had some winners in Healthcare, there were also some losers, with Sanofi and Fresenius Medical Care falling -14% and -19% respectively.

The Fund's exposure to long-dated sovereign Bonds continued to detract, as bond yields rose again in October. While the size of this position has reduced in recent months, exposure to Bonds has still been retained in the Fund to help counterbalance our overweight allocation in Shares, as Bonds are likely to rally if we go into recession.

The Fund remains overweight to Growth Assets despite our concerns about the impact of higher interest rate on the economy. The positions held in the Fund are mostly of higher quality and it is hoped that they would be less susceptible if the economy were to go into a slowdown. We were less active in terms of making changes in October than in previous months, which reflects the material outperformance of our selections in Growth Assets since February, with and Technology and Healthcare still being the key overweights. Conversely, the Fund currently holds just one US Bank (JPMorgan), underweight allocation to European Financials and no exposure to US Listed Property, which appear to be the most vulnerable sectors to higher bond yields.
