Monthly Commentary

The Alpha High Growth Fund delivered a total return of 1.34% (net of fees) in June 2025, marginally outperforming the Morningstar Australian Aggressive Target Allocation Index by -0.65%.

Global share markets rose modestly in June despite concerns over tariffs and US fiscal policy. Investor sentiment was supported by steady interest rates, easing bond yields, and solid corporate earnings. AI-related technology stocks remained strong and was the key driver. The ASX 200 edged higher, driven by a rebound in financials and record highs in Commonwealth Bank. Oil prices spiked then stabilised as geopolitical tensions eased between Iran, Israel, and the US.

For the Fund, the strongest contributors were large US technology and AI-focused companies, including NVIDIA, TSMC, Meta Platforms, Broadcom, Microsoft, and Amazon. Nintendo has performed well following the launch of its Switch 2 console. Jabil—a US-based electronics manufacturing services firm—also delivered strong returns. Detractors included Australian gold miners such as Northern Star Resources, Evolution Mining, West African Resources, and Regis Resources, which underperformed amid falling gold prices. Healthcare (including GSK) and consumer defensives (including Nestlé) also lagged as markets rotated toward growth-oriented sectors on tariff relief. Fixed income was positive for the month, with longer-dated Australian and US bonds recovering.

The Fund remains relatively neutral and diversified, with only minor portfolio changes in June. Our focus remains on company fundamentals and diversification, and we see lasting opportunity in AI. Healthcare also appears attractive after lagging recent gains. We continue to favour higher-quality companies and maintain a slight tilt away from high-valuation exposures. Fixed income remains important for risk management, and we retain a preference for Australian bonds. We remain cautious on the outlook given the uncertainty around US tariffs and rising government debt.
