Monthly Commentary

The Alpha Growth Fund delivered a return of 1.53% (net of fees) in August 2025, underperforming the Morningstar Australian Growth Target Allocation Index by -0.37%.

August was another good month for share markets, driven by strong US tech earnings and expectations of rate cuts, and the market largely ignored the potential impact of Trump's tariffs. Australian Shares rose +3.1% and Global Shares +0.9% for the month. Alphabet (Google), Microsoft, and Meta (Facebook) beat their earnings forecasts, while CSL and Woolworths disappointed in their updates. Locally the key gains came from the big iron ore miners and large banks. Fixed income posted modest gains, and the RBA cut rates to 3.60% as unemployment rose and demand softened.

Alphabet was the Fund's strongest contributor in August and has recovered sharply over the past six months after lagging because of fears that AI would destroy the Google search business. Westpac, ANZ, and NAB also performed well, outperforming CBA (not held), while BHP and Rio Tinto rallied despite China's economic fragility. Chinese technology company Tencent was another key contributor for the month, while Pilbara Minerals also surged 53% as lithium miners rebounded strongly. The key detractors were AI-related stocks (including NVIDIA, TSMC and Applied Materials) and other large US technology names (including Amazon). WiseTech, EVT, and GQG Partners underperformed and were sold following disappointing earnings. CSL (underweight) was also a notable drag after weaker revenues and concerns around restructuring, including job cuts and a vaccine unit spin-off. The Fund remains overweight in other Healthcare names, which were solid. The Fund's fixed income returns were solid.

In August, the Fund continued to tilt towards higher quality growth companies-oriented companies. New additions to the portfolio included Applied Materials, Roblox, Netwealth, MA Financial, Burberry and Codan and we also topped up our positions in Alphabet and Microsoft. We continue to hold broad exposure to fixed interest given the risk of recession.
